FASHION SCOOPS

PARTY PEOPLE: Apparently it was nearly dawn when Chelsea Clinton and Marc Mezvinsky called it quits at the after party that followed their Astor Courts wedding. But the happy couple weren't the only ones to hang on until 4:30 or 5 a.m. Former President Clinton was another night crawler, so much so that, as the hours wore on, he retreated to the nearby house where they were staying to lose the tux for the second round, according to a source who asked not to be named. Once the reception started to wind down, guests hit the property's indoor tennis court, which was covered with Guastavino-type tiles. Lighting designer Bentley Meeker set the stage for the three-day celebration. In a phone interview Tuesday, he said his favorite point of enlightenment was at the July 30 rehearsal dinner in Grassmere, N.Y. Held in an old stone barn owned by Pamela Newhouse, the location had one exposed wall. "At one point, the light inside perfectly matched the light outside. It was one of the most majestic moments I have ever seen," he said.

Meeker, whose portfolio includes Catherine Zeta-Jones and Michael Douglas' wedding, also has lit up Cynthia Rowley's fashion shows and has helped execute Ralph Lauren's shows.
